Defining Relative Clauses

What is a Clause

 A clause is a group of words that contains both a subject and a predicate. Although a clause can sometimes act as a sentence since it contains both a subject and a verb, it is not necessarily a complete sentence. That is to say; not every clause is a complete sentence.

- Relative clauses give us information about the person or thing mentioned.
- Defining relative clauses give us essential information information that tells us who or what we are talking about.
- Examples:
- The woman who lives next door works in a bank.
- These are the flights that have been cancelled.

• who/that

- We can use who or that to talk about people. that is more common and a bit more informal.
- She's the woman who cuts my hair.
- He's the man that I met at the conference.
- which/that
- We can use which or that to talk about things. that is more common and a bit more informal.
- There was a one-year guarantee which came with the TV.
- The laptop that I bought last week has started making a strange noise!

- Whose
- refers to the person that something belongs to.
- He's a musician whose albums have sold millions.

Practice: Join these sentences with a relative pronoun (who, which, that, whose)

- 1. I watched a film last week. The film was awful.
- 2. 1. The parcel reached me this morning. My brother sent it.
- 3. This is the house. Jack built it.
- 4.1 met a woman. Her husband is a famous producer.
- 5. I really like the car. I bought it last year.